 In addition, the recently introduced “first-day-at-school” programme by the Ghana Education Service is another effort to ensure effective implementation of inclusive education in Ghana. It is hoped that through this annual exercise, pupils who require assistive devices to enable them meaningfully participate in classrooms can be identified early enough for appropriate support.
Inclusive Education In Ghana: Are We Making Progress? Highlights. The Inclusive Education Policy defines the strategic path of the government for the education of all children with special educational needs. This policy builds upon sections in the 1992 Constitution, the National Development Agenda, the Education Strategic Plan and International Commitments to achieve national as well as international goals for creating an environment for addressing the diverse educational needs of Ghanaians.
Inclusive Education Policy | UNICEF Ghana
 Ghana’s Inclusive Education (IE) Policy transcends the idea of physical location and incorporates basic values that promote participation, friendship, and interaction. The policy further recognizes the varied learning needs of learners and requires all stakeholders to address the diverse needs of different groups of citizens in the Ghanaian education system.
Ghana: making inclusive education a reality | IIEP-UNESCO
 Inclusive Education rolled-out throughout Ghana. Ghana’s Inclusive Education Policy, together with its comprehensive implementation plan (2015–2019), has introduced Inclusive Education in schools countrywide. The programme has expanded from 29 districts in seven regions in 2011 to 216 districts in all ten regions by 2016.
