How do you catch an art are saying about Miss with each page turn. The characters are loveable and thoroughly British.

This is a perfect specimen of classic British mystery."

"What a joy Miss Seeton is. Why did I wait so long to read them? Splashy characters, lovely setting, and just plain funny."

"I've become a Miss Ess that get better with each book. A must for anyone who loves a good British surprising revelations of what a good brollie can do in a pinch." "What a great series. This is one of the best in English light reading mysteries." "Miss Seeton is a delightful sendup of the amateur sleuth. If your doctor has prescribed laughter as the best medicine, run and buy the entire series as fast as you can." Editorial reviews: "A most beguiling protagonist!" New York Times "Miss Seeton gets into wild drama with fine touches of farce . . . This is a lovely mixture of the funny and the exciting." San Francisco Chronicle "This is not so much black comedy as black-currant comedy . . . You can't stop reading. Or laughing." The Sun "Depth of description and lively characters bring this English village to life." Publishers Weekly "Fun to be had with a full cast of endearingly zany villagers . . . and the ever gently intuitive Miss Seeton." Kirkus Reviews "Miss Seeton is the most delightfully satisfactory character since Miss Marple." Ogden Nash "I think, on the whole, Miss Seeton is the most loveable and entertaining of any of today's fiction detectives. May she live forever." London Mystery Selection

 Meet the Nethercott sisters: China, Jade, and

Sian. Their dear, eccentric father died before he could convince the world of the existence of ghosts. Now, out of mourning, Jade is ready to prove him right. But soon she'll wish she were dead wrong. Murder most foul! Jade hears whispered in the halls of Nethercott Castle. Sir Mitchell Renshaw's ghost has come to tell her that he died at the hands of his fiancée's brother, Lord Gideon Bannatyne. As presumptuous in death as in life, he demands that Jade travel to London to protect his beloved, who, Renshaw believes, is also in mortal danger. Lord Bannatyne is a gentleman in name only, with his penchant for fast sport and faster women—and he sets Jade's body afire with a mere glance, even as he makes her an indecent bargain. But he proves his mettle when he risks arrest rather than ruin Jade's reputation. Now she must decide whether to heed the ghost's warning or follow her heart—and revel in what might be a killer's embrace.

This volume assembles English translations of three of Wilhelm Raabe's most intriguing narratives. Raabe (1831-1910) was one of the most complex and multilayered German writers of the second half of the nineteenth century. The three pieces published here for the first time in English are: German Moonlight, a tongue-in-cheek study of lunacy and split personality as a quintessentially German condition; Hoxter and Corvey, an unsettling reconstruction of civil unrest and anti-Jewish violence in the seventeenth century which advocates tolerance and sobriety in troubled times; and At the Sign of The Wild Man, an inverted genre piece in which a rural idyll is devastated by an agent of global capitalism."

The Arthur of the legends has quite stepped out of the historic page and become a hero without time or place in any real world, a king of the imagination, the loftiest figure in that great outgrowth of chivalric romance which formed the favorite fictitious literature of Europe during three or four of the mediæval centuries. The ballads and romances in which the King Arthur of mediæval story figures as the hero have here been transformed into easily readable prose and thus offer pleasant and enjoyable stories to us now. This is volume one out of two.

The Nethercott sisters—China, Jade, and Sian—recently lost their beloved father, who believed in ghosts with all his heart. So when China sees her first one, she realizes the apple doesn't fall far from the tree. On her way home, China is dumbfounded to find a man in a Roman centurion's garb. So Quintus Valerius explains: he's a ghost cursed to remain on earth until he can save one of his descendants from murder. Thus far his work has been in vain, but this time, the Roman spirit has a plan. He'll cause an injury to Alexander, Major Lord Braddock, so China might keep him from his murderer. Tending the patient's wounds proves nigh impossible.

Alexander refuses to stay put—and she can't keep from thinking about her handsome war hero in some very improper ways. But Quintus forgot to mention the second half of the curse, and China's destiny may be linked with Alexander's—to the death. "This adventurous, romantic tale will thrill everyone with its magic and unexpected twists and turns."—Lindsay McKenna, author of Heart of the Storm

Sir Walter Scott as a Poet Manchester University Press

Jane Austen distinguished herself with genius in literature, but she was immersed in all of the arts. Austen loved dancing, played the piano proficiently, meticulously transcribed piano scores, attended concerts and art exhibits, read broadly, wrote poems, sat for portraits by her sister Cassandra, and performed in theatricals. For her, art functioned as a social bond, solidifying her engagement with community and offering order. And yet Austen's hold on readers' imaginations owes a debt to the omnipresent threat of disorder that often stems—ironically—from her characters' socially disruptive artistic sensibilities and skill. Drawing from a wealth of recent historicist and materialist Austen scholarship, this timely work explores Austen's ironic use of art and artifact to probe selfhood, alienation, isolation, and community in ways that defy simple labels and acknowledge the complexity of Austen's thought.
