According to William Leach, religious communities that have come to North America have not been able to withstand the damaging influence of its consumer-oriented society which has subverted ecclesial customs, values, and practices. Rather than resisting, most of these groups have sought to integrate Christianity into the new culture. By doing so, they run the risk of marginalizing the church and fundamentally altering its teachings and practice. Of course, the real danger does not reside in the occasional use of isolated elements of our culture, the unreflected application of any technology available, the replacement of traditional ecclesial practices with the techniques of the business world, or even the substitution of ecclesial foundations of authority. Rather, danger lies in a set of fundamental principles that together define a basic orientation which is naturally and almost mindlessly attracted to these secular devices, sees no harm in them, justifies and amplifies their effects, and effectively supplants the mind of Christ which is supposed to govern the church. This study analyzes and documents the effects of that mindset and calls us back to the biblical and traditional alternatives that alone can bring healing and recovery to the church.

"Teaching small business management courses is exciting, but it can also be quite challenging. Some students take courses in small business management because they want to start and run their own firm someday. For other students, the idea of having their own business is appealing, even though they know they prefer to have a regular job after they graduate. Yet other students may find themselves in a small business management course when looking for an interesting elective to take. Most college students have very little experience actually managing a business. Some students, however, have grown up in a small business where they saw one or both parents (and sometimes, grandparents) work hard in the business. In other words, there are few similarities in how much students know and care about small firms. My goal in writing this text is to encourage student learning and engagement with small business, regardless of differences in students' motivations and reasons for signing up for this course"--
