 For painting white areas in the classic 'Eavy Metal style you can start with an astronomicon grey basecoat (or equivalent) and add progressively more white. However, the 'Eavy Metal team tend to avoid painting up to pure white when painting white and prefer to leave the top highlight as a slightly off colour. This may be for photogenic reasons.

 Have you a painting dilemma, problem or question? Well the 'Eavy Metal team are only too happy to help. You can ask them anything (related to painting miniatures, of course) and they'll have an answer. So whether it's about consistent basing techniques or how to paint the beard on a Dwarf, send your query to 'Eavy Metal's painting clinic. Bear in mind we work quite far in advance of publication so it will be a good few months before you see your query in print.

 Step 2: Painting time! So here is the 'Eavy Metal recipe, but this leaves out some important information on how each of these steps are accomplished, which I will attempt to illuminate on.
 Author's Note: I do not 100% copy the colors outlined by 'Eavy Metal, but as you can see from my pictures they are basically a match.

 Wash the metal and stones Agrax Earthshade, and once that's dry carefully wash Nuln Oil into the recesses. Step 9. Paint the areas you want to look rusted with very watered down Skrag Brown. It's better to thin it lots and build it up in layers. Stipple it on for a patchy effect. Step 10. Highlight the chains and rusted metal with Stormhost Silver. For the weapons, I stipple the paint along the edges rather than painting full lines to make it look dented and worn.
